Ayer's

Falling hair means weak hair. Then strengthen your hair; feed it with the only hair food, Ayer's Hair Vigor. It checks falling hair, makes the hair grow, completely cures dandruff. And it always restores color to gray hair, all the rich, dark color of early life.

Hair Vigor

grow, completely cures dandruff. And it always restores color to gray hair, all the rich, dark color of early life.

My hair was falling out badly and I was afraid I would lose it all. Then I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. It quickly stopped the falling and made my hair all I could wish it to be.

The Original High License Town.
The town council of Fulton has raised the fee for a saloon license from $1,500 to $3,000 per year. "Fulton, according to local tradition," says the Gazette, "is the original high license town in the United States." The city council in the year 1874, acting under the authority granted it by the special charter under which the city was governed until last September, fixed the saloon license at $1,500 a year. Such a tax had never before that time been placed on saloons, and the action of the local city fathers attracted much attention in this and other states.

"The high license measure in Fulton was adopted to rid the town of places where a great deal of disorder was created. After the civil war Fulton had something like a dozen grogeries on West Broadway, the street now known as West Fourth, and the district was called 'Whisky Row.' A fight was an every night occurrence, and to better regulate the sale of liquor and to preserve order, the high license ordinance was devised. It had the desired effect, for since that the liquor establishments in the city have never numbered more than four, and generally there have been but two.

"People are yet living in Fulton who remember the olden time when 'whisky was free as water.' The pioneers who came to Missouri when it was a wilderness made their own whisky, and, according to a local sage, whose memory goes back some seventy years, they 'kept it in water buckets in the dining room and drank it from gourds.' In those days, too, it was custom for every merchant to keep a barrel in his warehouse, which customers were expected to freely use. But the intoxicant was not worth $3 or $4 a gallon in those days. A tenth of that price was more nearly the precise value of it."

New York Press: The flood lasted one hundred and fifty days and nights. It rained forty days and forty nights. Was the water salt or fresh? This question has bothered me a good deal of late. If the latter, I have nothing to say, but if the former, let me ask what the animals drank on the voyage of the ark. It has never been settled what they ate; therefore we may reasonably judge that there was a suspension of appetite and thirst during the cruise of the original houseboat. During the forty days and nights of the storm, Noah might have caught rain water for his live stock; but what happened during the rest of the time of the deluge—one hundred and ten days and nights? Assuming that the rain fell at the rate of one foot every hour during the time the heavens were open, it would have taken eight hundred and thirty-three days to cover the tops of the highest mountains, estimating the limit to be only 29,000 feet. But it rained only forty days and forty nights! Therefore the rainfall must have been at the rate of twenty-one feet an hour! Could the ark have withstood such a downpour of over five hundred feet a day on every square foot of its surface?

Frank M. Lowe, an attorney of Kansas City, Mo., with his wife and son, arrived in Washington recently. They have been on a tour of the world, which has occupied sixteen months. They started westward from Kansas City going to San Francisco, from whence they sailed for Japan. During their tour they have traveled on every continent and in nearly every country. "The institutions of Great Britain are threatened with destruction by the liquor interests," Mr. Lowe said. "I know it to be a fact that at least fifty-two bishops of the Church of England are stockholders in breweries. The liquor interests are corrupting every institution that interferes with them. The rate at which crime is increasing in London is appalling."

Depositions of a number of old citizens of Missouri were taken at Columbia last week to substantiate a claim of $17,475 for damages done to the Missouri University property by federal troops during the civil war. "Merrill's Horse," a regiment of federal cavalry was quartered in the University property for nearly two years from December, 1861. A claim for damage done by it was presented by the University in 1861 and approved shortly afterwards by a military commission appointed by General Hancock consisting of General Penrose, now of Denver, Colorado, Captain J. H. Jollins of the U. S. Navy and Lieutenant Brownlee of the U. S. Army, both now dead. Four years later the General Auditor refused to allow the finding of the commission on the ground that to do so would open other claims and bankrupt the government. Recently, federal policy in regard to such allowances has changed and the University claim is revived.

One exhibit at the World's Fair that no visitor can afford to miss is that of the agricultural products of Missouri. This exhibit is considered by competent judges the best exhibit in agriculture that the world has seen in times ancient or modern. One half acre is occupied. Fifty per cent of this is taken by corn, thirty-five per cent by wheat, oats and similar grains and the remainder by grasses. Three pyramids made entirely of corn are striking features of the exhibit. One of these fifty feet high stands in the center, the others, smaller, are at the ends. Forming a border about the exhibit is a series of pictures made entirely of agricultural products showing the evolution of agricultural processes. The first of these shows a stick plow drawn by camels, the reaping hook and the threshing flail, all of the time of Joseph; the last picture the modern steam plow at work in northwest Missouri and the modern machinery for reaping and threshing. The exhibit was prepared under the direction of H. J. Waters, Dean of the Missouri Agricultural College and it is a monumental work—a credit to the college and to Missouri.

Miss Mamie Goodrich assisted by her sisters Misses Etta May and Anna and Mrs. J. W. Barley delightfully entertained in honor of their guests, Misses Nina and Edith Goodrich of Pendleton, Ind., and the Misses Thurman of Troy, Mo. The main feature of the evening was a drawing contest in which Miss Ethel Barker and Jas. McQuie excelled all others. Delightful refreshments were served and at a late hour all departed saying, as all those have said who ever enjoyed the hospitality of Miss Goodrich, to have never enjoyed themselves more. Those present besides the hostesses guest of honor were:

Resolutions of Respect.

Hall of Montgomery Lodge No. 123 I. O. O. F., Montgomery City, Mo., July 25, 1904:

Death has again entered our ranks and removed from our midst our dearly beloved and highly esteemed brother, William M. Gilchrist. The lodge has lost a consistent and faithful member; the home a loving and devoted father, and the community an upright, enterprising and loyal citizen. With sorrowful hearts but with a hope that looks far beyond this vale of tears to a bright and happy home, where all is life, beauty and joy, we pay this last tribute of respect to our departed brother:

Resolved: Therefore, that this lodge wear the emblems of mourning and be properly draped for sixty days. That we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy in this their dark hour of affliction and commend them to Him, who alone can heal the broken hearted and comfort the distressed soul.

Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this lodge, and that a copy of the same be sent to the family of our deceased brother and be furnished the papers of our city for publication.

Cleared the Farm of Rats.

Someone inquired how to get rid of rats and mice, writes a correspondent in the Sedalia Capital. Some 20 years ago I had charge of a two thousand acre stock farm out in Indiana, and one morning counting 120 rats about the stable cribs and cattle pens, I knew I must do something, and so tried an old remedy, which was as follows:

On a very large number of pieces of old shingles I put about one-half teaspoonful of molasses, and on that with my pocket-knife I scraped a small amount of concentrated lye, and then placed the old shingles around under the stable floors, and under the cribs. The next morning I found some 40 dead rats, and the rest vanished the farm and left for parts unknown.

I have cleared many farms and ranches of the pests in the same way and have never known it to fail.
